London's 2993 to Dept. Decisions with regard to action if any on stockpile exceedingly complex and in the short run mainly psychological and political. They relate to Soviet assessment Western position and German view likely prospective course of action.

2-358 Stocks now in Berlin satisfy requirements of current policy. Dept had considered possibility of augmenting stockpile, queried Bonn which opposed. On balance, therefore, Dept believes action should not be taken this time, but funds available kept on reserve to meet future contingencies.
